WESTERN HOTEL,

No. 228 MARKET STREET,

Sign of General Washington.

THE subscriber begs leave to inform his friends and the public, that he has taken that well known establishment in Market street, next door to the Pittsburgh Mail Stage Office, and lately occupied by Mr. George Yohe. To those who have been accustomed to resort to this house, it is unnecessary to point out its superior advantages. For the information of others we deem it necessary to state that its situation is central, high, healthy and convenient to business; an extensive range of back buildings, consisting of lodging rooms, afford a fine view of the city to the eastward, and admit a free and uninterrupted circulation of air—and what will give them a decided preference in the opinion of many, is the attachment thereto of balconies, so constructed as not only to afford pleasant promenades, but easy means of escape in the event of any necessity from any sudden alarm of fire. The great Western Stages start every morning from the door, and on the premises is one of the best Livery Stables in the city, conducted by Mr. John Tomlinson, where travellers' horses will be faithfully attended to. With these advantages, and some other improvements now making added to his own unremitted exertions to please, the subscriber confidently hopes for, and very respectfully solicits a share of public patronage.

CASH,

I HAVE determined to sell my FARM, at the fork of Chartier's creek, in the county of Washington, fifteen miles from Pittsburgh, consisting of about 214 acres, so low for CASH as to make it a great object for any one having the command of money. Its advantages in point of soil, timber, water, sugar camps, neighbourhood, proximity to mills, markets, the turnpike road from Washington to Pittsburgh, meeting houses and an exeellent college, are well known—Added to these, some enterprising individuals of capital, are now boring for Salt within a quarter of a mile of it, at a lick which has produced salt from the surface, so that no doubt is entertained of their success. This will be useful, not only to the vicinity in general, but it will be of peculiar benefit to the tract hereby offered for sale, as it will afford a constant market for the stone coal with which the land abounds. I will give the purchaser a PATENT in my own name and a general warranty deed. The title is indisputable. I am willing to dispose of eight or ten other tracts, on moderate terms.

TUESDAY MORNING DECEMBER 7, 1819.

COMMUNICATED.

To the Editor of the Statesman.

Like yourself I may perhaps, have but little of the knight-errant in my disposition, but I hope I shall always have enough to induce me to assist a single combatant who is assailed by numbers. Such appears to be the predicament of Mr. Neville. Mr. Duane alone would be a formidable opponent; and experienced and able as he must be allowed to be, in literary and political warfare, there are few who would willingly beard "the lion in his den." But when his nervous pen is aided by the abilities of Mr. Hamilton, the "Citizen of Butler" and yourself, the odds become fearful indeed.—But truth will ever predominate, and although clamorous ignorance, and obstinate pertinacy may for a while drown the voice of reason, the event will shew that the battle is not to the strong, where strength consists only in numbers.

It is a trite observation, that none are so blind as those who wilfully close their eyes—none so stupid as they who are determined not to be convinced. Such persons stumble over straws, cavil at words, and wantonly misconceive the most obvious meanings. From the commencement of Mr. Neville's editorial career he has laboured without intermission to convince the citizens of Philadelphia of their blindness to their own interests, and neglect of their own security. This he conceived to be a legitimate subject for his editorial pen, because Pittsburgh and Philadelphia must flourish or fall together. Philadelphia is the great mart from whence the most considerable part of this state must draw its supplies of foreign goods, as well as the natural vent for our domestic produce. She is indeed to us in every sense of the word a metropolis, the seat of the arts, the school of science, the fountain head of literature. In her prosperity therefore all parts of the state are deeply interested; every tie that can be added to those that bind us to her is a sinew which gives strength to the whole; every avenue which facilitates our approach to her is an artery which distributes wealth, and produces general health and vigour. The local position of Pittsburgh, renders a close alliance and friendly intercourse with Philadelphia peculiarly desirable. We have often contended, and we still contend, that it is in the power of these two cities to secure the trade of the west, by presenting advantages to the western merchants which cannot be rivalled. The wealth of Philadelphia and the long established credit of her merchants abroad, [illegible] goods at the lowest price. Let her add a courteous civility and a liberal policy towards strangers; and let her contribute a pittance of her wealth to the fabrication of a permanent and safe road to the Ohio river, and we confidently ask where can she find a rival? can she find one in New York, which can only be approached from the west by the means of a circuitous water communication which one third of the year will be choaked with ice; or in Baltimore, which though public spirited is young and poor, and is now groaning under the visitations of disease and bankruptcy? we say, no. If then, Philadelphia possesses the means of securing this trade, by what other avenue can she transmit her supplies with as much advantage as through Pittsburgh? We offer the nearest accessible point on the Ohio, the best ground for a road, and a port thronged with experienced and trusty navigators, and rich in mercantile credit and intelligence. We are also an integral part of that state of which Philadelphia is the pride and ornament, and as such have a right to expect the preference and support of our opulent and accomplished elder sister. It is contended further, that if things were ordered as we wish them, not only the two cities in question, but the whole of the intermediate country would reap the benefit. The streams of commerce enrich not merely the channels through which they pass, but spread fertility on every side. The whole state indeed, by the advantages conferred on portions of it would derive collateral benefit.

After this hasty sketch, let us enquire what were really the sentiments of Mr. Neville, that you and others are so much affronted at. Is he inimical to the interests of Philadelphia? no, for he has been industriously studying, and most ably enforcing on her citizens, their best interests. Does he dislike or despise Philadelphia? no, for he has in every instance praised the taste and genius of her artists and scholars, and lauded the magnificence and public spirit displayed in her internal improvements; he admires the beautiful harmony of her municipal regulations, and as a Pennsylvanian he exults in her proud superiority over every other American capitol. Is he jealous of Philadelphia? no, no—Pittsburgh is no jealous of Philadelphia; she clings to her as a friend, but aspires not to be a rival. What then have been his feelings, & how have they been expressed? A long residence in Pittsburgh, and a close attention to the affairs of his native state have impressed on his mind a deep conviction of the vital importance of uniting its eastern and western extremities by the strongest of all ties, those of interest and mutual dependence. Believing that the commerce of Philadelphia, the manufactures of Pittsburgh, and the agricultural interest of the rest of the state, could only flourish by affording assistance to each other, he has endeavoured to give currency to the self evident truth, that this assistance could only be effectually given by means of immediate, extensive, permanent improvements on our roads and rivers, which by facilitating inland navigation, would not only render the markets for our surplus produce more accessible, and bring the supplies of our wants more cheaply to our doors, but would make us the factors and the carriers of our neighbours. This is the foundation on which he has built his speculations; and if an honest zeal in so good a cause, has excited on his part a warmth of remonstrance, or even a little gentle invective, it is a fault which might be pardoned in Philadelphia, and surely ought not to be censured in Pittsburgh, or even in Butler county. But Mr. Neville's editorial remarks on this subject, as well as every other, had been marked by a manly independence, and by plain, temperate, intelligent reasoning. Having the good fortune to unite the feelings of a gentleman, to the acquirements of a scholar, he is not in the habit of abusing his press on any occasion. The apathy of the Philadelphians on this subject however, has been insupportable, and it is no wonder that even his patience is exhausted, and that he has at last branded them with reproach for their credulous, supine, and fool hardy, security. Their wanton negligence and egregious vanity on this subject are insufferable. Even Mr. Duane, in his temperate and well written remonstrance, displays the cloven foot, when he says that he warned them long ago that if they did not follow his advice the western counties would suffer. Observe, he was not fearful that Philadelphia would suffer, but the western counties! This is the very "head and front of their offending"—the fault of which Mr. Neville complained—that the inhabitants of our metropolis are so puffed up with their importance, so wrapped in security, that they cannot be convinced that they will be benifited by the western trade or injured by the loss of it; and that they seem to think that we are begging alms of them, when we ask them to assist in works of great public importance which will fill their purses as well as ours. They seem to think that nothing can injure Philadelphia, that the western people must go there for supplies, and that even if they went elsewhere it would be no great loss, as their custom is at any rate but a drop in the [illegible] they should not be surprised if this contempt [illegible] reciprocated by us, nor complain if our western brethren cease to go up into Egypt for corn, as soon as the present famine is over.

But whether Mr. Neville was right or wrong, until now, seemed to be a matter of great indifference. All was quiet in Butler county; the Editor of the Statesman was listening, and the Philadelphians so far from attempting to answer a single proposition, did not even evince their surprise or disapprobation by a squib, a paragraph, or even a pun. Thus unmolested did Mr. Neville pass for nearly two years, repeating almost semi-weekly this tremendous offence.—It happened, however, that he had occasion to visit Harrisburgh, and that he was not one of those people who travel with their eyes and ears shut; he had not crossed the mountains for many years, and all that he saw was interesting to him. It seems too, that although he was disappointed in one particular, in another he was greeably surprised. He found in the Governor, for whom he had not, probably, entertained the most profound respect, and against whom, if he voted at all, he probably gave his suffrage, an agreeable and intelligent man. He discovered also that his excellency was friendly to domestic manufactures and western improvements, and he had the candour to give credit where he tho't it due, even to a political opponent.—He had no reason to doubt the Governor's sincerity on this point, nor indeed was it likely that the executive would be so impolitic as to openly advocate a system of policy which it did not intend to adopt. But he might as safely have grasped a hornet's nest, as to have mentioned in a complimentary manner the name of Governor Findlay. The alarm spread even from "Dan unto Beersheba"—from the banks of the Delaware to the Cranberry plains; the idea that the Pittsburgh Gazette had been won over to the side of Governor Findlay spread like wild fire; but in venting their spleen at Mr. Neville for his supposed dereliction, and which only exists in their own jealous imaginations, his assailants carefully conceal the subjects nearest to their hearts, and attack him upon the one on which for two years he has preached to silent unfeeling auditors. Mr Breck, for whose genius Mr. Neville has always expressed great respect, is lugged in; and our editor is anathematised for opposing an impracticable plan for carrying the trade of Philadelphia away from Pittsburgh. It is true that Mr. Neville did suggest that some of the streams which Mr. Breck proposes to improve, have not water enough in them in the summer to float a canoe, and that all of them are rendered impassable by ice in the winter, and occasionally by freshets; it is true too, that he is so skeptical as to doubt whether Mr. Breck had accomplished his design, he would have eloquence enough to persuade the future dwellers on the shores of the Missouri, that it would be easier for them to float their produce up the Ohio and Allegheny than down the Mississippi. On this subject, too, it appears that 'doctors disagree,' for while the 'Citizen of Butler' informs us that Mr. Breck and his opinions were treated with great respect in Harrisburg, Mr. Hamilton, another of Mr. Neville's assailants, speaks of him as a visionary. How shall we answer those who thus contradict themselves & each other?

On the subject of the middle counties and the eastern members, documents have been referred to by the 'Citizen of Butler County.' Mr. Neville, no doubt, had examined the point before he touched on it; but I hope that he will now refer to the journals of each house, where he will find his assertions supported by positive proof. One document I will refer to myself: it is a communication in the Pittsburgh Gazette of April 27, 1819, signed "A Member,' in which it is stated unequivocally, that all the exertions of the western members in favour of the great turnpike were defeated by the prejudices and intrigues of eastern and middle members, several of whom he names To the writer of that piece, and other members of the late general assembly, now here, I also refer.

But although we can easily see thro' the motives which have led the Governor's enemies to attack Mr. Neville for speaking well of him, at this eventful crisis, it is difficult to discover what motives has induced you to join the clamour.—Is it possible that jealousy could be the motive, and that the favourites of a republican governor, like those of an oriental prince, dislike to have their numbers increased? Are you fearful that Mr. Neville, by becoming the advocate of Mr. Findlay, will supplant you in the conspicuous station which you occupy in the political government of Allegheny county? If such is the case, you may make yourself easy for the present; Mr. Neville, I suspect, will know who all the candidates are, before he declares for either.

One more observation, and I have done. You blame Mr Neville for writing too much, and recommend the plan of yourself and 'your brother Mercury,' who 'write nothing when you have nothing to write.' Permit me to congratulate both of you on your rigid adherence to this rule. From the meagre appearance of your columns, I had felt apprehensive that the hard times, the afflictions of fortune, or a press of other business had driven you from your desks, or perhaps, indeed, that you might have been guilty of negligence; but hereafter we shall know that your paucity of matter arises not from want of time or cash, but from want of ideas. That you write nothing, we know—that you have nothing to write, we have your word for.—Permit me to suggest however, that your subscribers may not like to give something for nothing; and that a little original matter, now and then, even of your own composition would be acceptable if it were worth nothing but to laugh at.

The Meteor.

On Sunday evening last, the Meteor, of which an account has been published in the Trenton, Wilmington and Baltimore papers, passed over this city, in a south-westerly direction. I did not see it, but have conversed with several who did. Its appearance was like that of a red hot piece of iron, emitting sparks.—When it passed Germantown, it was supposed to be so near the earth, that some people thought it would set fire to the houses. I conversed with a gentleman, who, at the time it passed, was near Clermont Academy in the direction of Frankford, and who was strongly convinced that the Meteor was not more than 200 yards from him, and as he saw the light disappear, he considered that it had fallen to the ground. I presume that this appearance of proximity was universal, for every-body who saw it, fancied that they saw it explode at a short distance from them. The impression in the upper part of our city, was that it fell near the corner of Broad and South street. At Wilmington they supposed it to have exploded near Christiana; and at Baltimore they imagined that it terminated near that city. It is possible that its course might have been much further; and it were to be wished that all the newspapers of the different places where it was seen, would notice it. The time of its appearance here, was about a quarter past six o'clock, as near as I could ascertain, and at Baltimore it was stated to be at half pas six. It would be interesting to know its velocity, for that would of itself, perhaps, account for the suddenness of its disappearance, and its dipping itself below the horizon, would account for its appearing to fall on the ground.

CLAIBORNE, Nov. 5.

It is with great concern we state, that the yellow fever has again made its appearance, with increased malignity in the devoted town of Mobile. The inhabitants, who had returned to the town under the impression that this fatal disease which had swept away so many valuable citizens, had subsided, are again returning to the country.

By gentlemen recently from Pensacola we learn, that the Spanish garrison is incessantly employed in repairing and strengthening the fortifications. For several weeks the Governor had been constantly at the Barrancas superintending the works. Our informants did not understand that any reinforcements had arrived. [Alabama Cour.

Newton, (N. J.) Nov. 22.

MAMMOTH.—Four of the teeth of a mammoth, or some very large animal, were brought to this office last Friday, by Levi Howell, Esq.—they had been dug up on Saturday the 13th inst. from about two feet under ground, on the edge of a brook, in his meadow, in Oxford township, near Hope, in this county—two of the teeth weigh each three pounds, the other two weigh about two pounds each—some bones were also found with the teeth, most of which crumbled to pieces—one was measured after it had crumbled considerably, and still measured 20 inches around it. This was thought to be a part of one of the tusks.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Manchester, (Eng.) to a friend in this city, dated 26th Oct. 1819.

"I am truly sorry to hear of your circulating medium being so much deranged; and when I compare it with that of England I think it will always be subject to serious changes and fluctuations, and your country may yet be a long time before you recover your former confidence and real stability.—However, we are not without our troubles here;---but take from us a few evil disposed firebrands and we should be comfortable enough.—At the same time, the most we know and dread is, a little noise, and people neglecting their work, and causing disappointment."

Pittsburgh, Dec. 3, 1819

PITTSBURGH.

Tuesday, Dec 7, 1819

We beg the Editor of the Statesman's don, if he presumes we imputed to any of the feelings of chivalry; if ever had done it, his own publication ld have given us the lie more com- ly than any assertion of his own.— e characteristics of knighthood are dour and fair dealing; these are in- ents which have seldom distinguish- the publications of this gentleman, are qualities in which his last editori- marks are extremely deficient & as article is the only one of any length ch has appeared editorially, since commencement of the Statesman, it but fair to take it as a specimen of the or's character.

Where the talents of a Sancho so much minate over those of an Orlando, it in vain to reason or to remonstrate, erwise we would point out the garbled ir manner in which our observations quoted and commented on. Like preacher who preached up and down scriptures without any particular text, Pentland has eked out two columns his method of handling Mr. Duane's arks, the communication of a "Citi- of Butler County," and our own ob- vations. He has really commented on us up and down; he has taken one mark from one place and put it in ano- er, and given us feelings we never cherished. He has made us treat the "Citizen of Butler" with sarcasm, when owing to the assailable* nature of that tleman's piece we were peculiarly guarded for particular reasons, and only enough to rebut some of the unne- ary warmth which it displayed. He asserted that we applied the term upid' to the Philadelphians, when an idea never entered our heads; term we used for them was 'arrogant.' this mode of quoting, the holy scrip- es may be convicted of impiety. and be made to say 'There is no God.' short this editorial farago of unfair tation and false comment leaves no lusion on the mind of the reader ex- that Mr. Pentland is also an admi of Mr. Breck's plan, and that he and brother 'Mercury write nothing they have nothing to write about.' to Mr. Breck time will test the point. the last, the world, particularly the scribers to the Statesman, have long convinced of a part of the position, that the editor 'wrote nothing;' for reason however for this 'nothing-ing' talent, we are now indebted to Pentland; as this is the only in- stance of candour which he has been guilty of we must give him credit for it; however his patrons may complain dullness, they cannot impeach him IS INSTANCE, for want of truth.

The communication from 'A Citizen of But- ' was no doubt written with great haste; it ces none of the talents of the author, for om we entertain a sincere friendship and es- . It was on this account we forbore to use thing like sarcasm.

An article appeared in the "Aurora" he dated Pittsburgh, on the ject of the Branch Bank in this place; was prompted, it seems, by a remark de use of in our paper, in announcing appointment of the new direction of institution. We are sorry the pub ation has appeared, nor do we think it tified by any thing that was said in Gazette; the remark was made in absence of the acting editor, but it is tain that nothing hostile to the new directors was intended by it. As citi- zens, the old and new board are alike to . We never have been, and probably never shall be obliged to resort to this in- stitution for assistance; if the necessity should occur, we should expect indul- gence from the present members with as full confidence, as from those who were left out. We regret, however, that these kind of publications should be made; at the same time we are not the champions of the Bank; we know nothing of its transactions but from general report, and the sovereign contempt in which we hold the mother institution, prevents us from having any disposition to meddle in its affairs, or that of its most distant ramifications; we always considered it as unconstitutional in its operations, and corrupt in its origin; we are sure its charter is forfeited; we are convinced it has been injurious to the interests of our country and to the dignity of our character, and we hope, and we believe, that its charter will be lost. We did, however, on a former occasion, when Pittsburgh was associated with Baltimore, deprecate the association; we did believe then, and we believe still, that her citizens are e to pay their bank debts, particularly those owed to the Branch here; not, to be sure, if they be pushed very suddenly, but on condition of the time being given which bank debtors have generally received amongst us. If we are deceived we shall be sorry, because we believe most of the large borrowers are men of very substantial real property, and not of mere floating wealth. But, be the event what it may, we are not defenders of the institution: we have never been admitted behind the curtain, and we shall not fight in the dark; we only meant to deny having taken any part between the old and new directors; we have no shadow of interested feelings on the subject.

For the Gazette.

MOLASSES FROM PUMPKINS.

Perhaps it is not generally known, that excellent molasses may be made from pumpkins. The process is exceedingly simple, and the product resembles in every particular of colour, taste and smell, the common sugar-house molasses.

Pare clean, and slice the pumpkins, pour on as much water as will nearly cover them, and boil until the whole is converted into a pultaceous mass. Press out the liquor, and boil it for seven or eight hours, then pass it through a fine sieve to clear it from the small particles of pumpkin. The pulp that remains is excellent food for cattle, and in preparing pumpkins for their use, if the little additional trouble of paring and cleaning were taken, molasses might be made in considerable quantity by every person who keeps a cow.—Half a dozen pumpkins will yield half a gallon of molasses. THE SPANISH TREATY.

Public opinion as to the final ratification or rejection of this Treaty by the King of Spain, is still unsettled. The letters from Madrid and Gibraltar differ materially on the subject. The Gazette of this morning announces, that there is a letter in town from Don Onis, who negociated the treaty, saying that "it is not but will be ratified." The Don also remarks, that "the Spanish Gen. Millet who has a perfect geographical knowledge of the Floridas, is to be sent to the United States, to settle definitively, the differences which have occurred as to certain Spanish grants."

The National Intelligencer announces captain Read's arrival at the city of Washington, with despatches, but sheds no additional light as to the nature of their contents.

PARIS, Oct. 16.

We read in the Journal of North Brabant very curious details on the removal of a wind mill, entire, to the distance of five thousand five hundred and twenty feet, from the place where it was originally erected. This removal was effected in 12 days, and the mill will soon be ready for use in its new situation. Nothing was taken out of the interior of of this enormous mass, and the mill itself was in operation during its transport. A glass filled with water, which was in the gallery, did not experience the least agitation, though the mill advanced four hundred feet each day.

A building connected with the mill, and built principally of stone, and being 25 feet high, 28 broad, and 27 long, was then removed after it in five days. Not a stone was shaken from its place or a glass broken. The traineau for the carriage of the mill was constructed in the most simple manner, and the whole operation did honour to H. Homberger, of Osterwick, who directed the work.

LATEST FROM ENGLAND.

By the ship James Monroe, arrived at New York from Liverpool in a very short passage, the editors of the Franklin Gazette have received files of the London Times, Morning Herald and Morning Chronicle to the 31st of October. The most important articles are extracted.—The reformers continued their meetings in England; and notwithstanding the increasing insolence of constables and other inferior minions of tyranny to the people, public opinion was expressed in the most unequivocal and manly language.—The military preparations of the ministry were unremitted for the suppression of any revolutionary movements. At the Durham meeting, Mr. LAMBTON, a highly respectable gentleman, animadverted with the most pointed severity on the proceedings of the military and magistrates at Manchester, which he declared, 'were written in letters of blood.' 'Some slave, he said, had dared to say that the words 'Liberty or Death,' inscribed on the banners of the meeting that day, were a proof of its traitorous nature.—When the time came that the coupling of those words should be deemed the harbinger of rebellion, he should be glad to disown the country which had given him birth. Who had heard unmoved the song of Scottish independence burst upon his ears?

Who would be a traitor knave?
Who would fill a coward's grave?
Who would live to be a slave?
Let him turn and flee.
Who for Scotland's king and law,
For Scotland's rights his sword would draw;
Freeman stand or freeman fall?
Let him follow me.

"He, for one, would not consent in silence to hear such sentiments branded as seditious. It was the cry of liberty in similar terms which expelled the Stuarts, and made the way for the Brunswick family to the throne of these realms." A meeting had taken place in Scotland also, to which the people went marching to the tune, played on the bagpipes, "the Campbell's are coming."—The chairman wore the cap of liberty and the emblem of revolution. Hunt had differed with some of the more violent radical reformers, and his bust is stated to have been broken to pieces at some of their societies. One Thistlewood seems to be the leader of the thorough going radicals. There was some talk of the Grenville party uniting with the ministry. Carlile had been put into the king's bench prison for his blasphemy, and for want of bail. He had called on his friends the deists, as he terms them, to aid him, and anticipated the requisite assistance on the arrival of Cobbett with the bones of Paine.

From Hippley's Narrative.

PAEZ.

'General Paez is uncommonly active. He will, for amusement, as he did before some English officers, single out a wild bull from the herd of cattle, and ride him down, pass his lance through, and thus slay him; or gallop up to the animal's rear, and grasping the tail firmly in his hand, twist the tail so suddenly and so strongly as to throw the beast on his side, when, if some of his followers do not come up at the moment to pierce him, he will, by a cut of his sabre, hamstring and leave him, until the arrival of his people puts the finishing stroke to life, and the flesh is prepared for cooking.

'At the action of Ortizer, in April 1818, Paez and his cavalry were engaged, and had made several successful charges against the enemy, who, though inferior in numbers, was far superior to Bolivar in discipline and generalship; but the general in chief had so puzzled matters, and so confounded the line, that the infantry were beaten, and nearly destroyed before Bolivar could collect himself; which extorted some sharp rebukes from Paez to the chief in person. Paez covered his retreat, at Bolivar's request, and one or two charges secured the remnant of the infantry from annihilation. After the last of these charges, which he led himself, he retired on one side, and having dismounted, was seized with a fit, (something of the hysterical kind) and lay on the ground foaming at the mouth. Colonel English who related the circumstance was present.—He went up to Paez, though some of his people warned him not to disturb the general by any means, 'he will soon be well, (said they:) he is often so, and none of us dare to touch him until perfectly recovered.' Colonel English, however, approached, and having sprinkled some water in his face, and forced a little down his throat he speedily recovered; and coming to his recollection, thanked him cordially, saying he was a little overcome by the day's fatigue, having with his own lance, and with his own arm, killed thirty nine of the enemy; and been taken ill whilst running the fortieth through the body. The bloody lance lay by his side, and he presented it to Colonel English, as a memento of his friendship and affection. Paez soon recovered, and joined his legion; and when Col. English departed, he presented him with three fine horses from his own stud.

'Since the refusal of Gen. Morillo to give quarter, Paez has never been known to spare the life of a prisoner. Yet, at the battle of Calaheza having been successful in one or two charges, by which he forced the royalists to retreat, he was in the height of good humour, & an officer was taken by his man and brought to him—he was mounted. The General asked him a few questions, and then directed his man of business to do his duty. The Spanish officer begged hard for his life. 'Well, (says Paez,) ride to yonder tree, [pointing to one at some distance off,] and when you get there, escape as fast as you can, and take care I do not come up with!' The officer obeyed, and when he arrived at the tree, casting one glance behind him, commenced his race. Paez pursued, and soon overtook him, and was in the act of putting his lance through his body, when the royalist said, with some presence of mind, 'General Paez is too noble to take advantage.—My horse was tired and could not gallop; but you, General, if you give me your horse and the same liberty, I think I could save my life.' 'Done (answered Paez) and immediately the Spanish officer was mounted on his horse. The distance was again pointed out; the officer rode to the spot, and started afresh. Paez, in the mean time, had mounted the jaded royalist's charger. He started also, and gained ground, and in about two miles actually came up with the unfortunate Spaniard, who fell beneath the point of the insurgent General's spear. The race was witnessed by thousands, and the air was soon filled with shouts of applause bestowed on the intrepid and sanguinary Paez.'

Proclamation.

BY virtue of a precept under the hands of the honorable Samuel Roberts, esquire, president of the courts of Common Pleas in and for the 5th judicial district of the state of Pennsylvania, and justice of the courts of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery, in and for the said district, and Francis M'Clure and James Riddle, esquires, associate judges of the same courts in and for the county of Allegheny, dated the 6th day of November, 1819, and to me directed, for holding a court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery, at the court house in the city of Pittsburgh, on the first Monday of January next.

PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby given to all justices of the peace, coroner and constables, within the county of Allegheny, that they be then and there in their own proper persons, with their rolls, records, inquisitions, examinations, and other remembrances, to do those things which to their office in that behalf appertain to be done, and also those who will prosecute the prisoners that now are or may be in the jail of Allegheny county, to be then and there to prosecute against them as shall be just.

MORGAN NEVILLE, Sheriff.

Given at Pittsburgh, November 30, 1819.

To Rent,

FOR ONE OR MORE YEARS;

Three Elegant Houses,

WELL calculated for any kind of business. The first is situated in Market street, nearly opposite the Allegheny Bridge, and next door to Borbidge & Tackaberry. The other two adjoining the warehouses of Allen & Grant in Front street, between Market and Wood streets.

These houses are particularly worthy the attention of men of business. Possession will be given any time before the first of April next.

HENRY HOLDSHIP.

November 19.

To Emigrants.

HAVING associated myself with a considerable company for the purpose of settling a new place in the state of Illinois, opposite the mouth of White river and Patoka, at the foot of the Grand Rapids of the Wabash, (MOUNT CARMEL) with an intention to remove to it, as soon as practicable, I have contracted for the making and burning of 150,000 brick, which I wish put up next season into buildings, and the Bricklayer's and carpenter's work undertaken conjointly, the plaistering and whitewashing included. Lands adjoining the Town, and town lots, at cash prices, and cash, a proportion of each will be given in payment when the work is completed.

Having entered lands for the accommodation of settlers favourable to the views of the settlement, a considerable body adjoining the settlement and town lands, divided into lots of from 10 to 100 and 160 acres each may be had at the Congress prices, with the exception of the interest on the money paid, and a small advance to defray expences, &c.

I wish to employ some persons to enclose or clear lands for me, for which I will pay in lands at cash prices. I have a body of open and timbered lands, that I would lease from 5 to 10 years on advantageous terms to emigrants unable to purchase. A convenient farm to let, by an early application to the Agent may be had.

A canal for boats and water works around the Grand Rapids of the Wabash, a company is forming to commence opening next season, that will afford employment for labourers, and no inconsiderable inducement to capatilist to invest their funds in the establishment. Considerable encouragement and aid have already been tendered for that purpose by emigrants from the Eastern States. The river is open for navigation from this place to New-Orleans all the year.

Application may be made to WM. BEAUCHAMP, the Agent for the establishment, residing in Mount Carmel, or to the subscriber, residing at present in New-port. None need apply but moral characters.
